

Capitol Connection Q&A for Contractors

Week of 4/15/2024

By Shauna Krause, President, Capitol Services, Inc.

Almost all rules have, but an expert can share what may be little known exceptions! Why would a licensed contractor choose a 64 hour work week? An elevator contractor learns that what went down can come up again, but there will be a test...

Q: Instead of converting our entity type from an 'S'-Corp to an Limited Liability Company (LLC) in Nevada, we would prefer to hold separate licenses under the LLC. Do you know the limit for the number of licenses for which a Qualified Individual is permitted to qualify in Nevada? I am struggling to find that answer on the Board's website.

A: A Qualified Individual can qualify more than one license in Nevada if one of the following conditions exists:

- (1) The individual owns at least 25% of each company in which he/she qualified for,
OR
- (2) One licensee owns at least 25% of the other license.

There is nothing in Nevada which specifies a limit to the number of licenses a person can qualify as long as one of the above conditions exists.

Q: I am an Responsible Managing Employee (RME) on a license (CA) and would like to know if I can qualify two separate businesses with the same ownership? I have no stake in either one. One company has me as the RME/Qualifier and I would like to be the Qualifier for the other as well. The classifications would be the same. I receive a paycheck from both companies and work over 32 hours at each business.

A: An RME can only qualify one license unless either a) one entity you are qualifying directly owns at least 20% of the other, OR b) the majority of the Officers/Managers/Members are the same on both licenses. You will be required to provide a statement to the CSLB certifying that you work for over 32 hours a week for each company and will continue to do so while you are acting as RME for both entities.

Q: We have an incorporated General contractor's license. When reviewing our list of Officers we saw that our previous "Board Chair" was on there listed as an Officer. We dissociated her when she left our Board of Directors, however we weren't sure if we needed to add the current Board Chair to our license or not. I couldn't find anything that said it was required to have that particular position on the license. Do you have any guidance there?

A: The CSLB's rule is Corporations are only required to list their President, Secretary, and Treasurer on the contractor's license. Any additional officers that you have are optional. If you want them to have signing authority for the license and be able to communicate with the CSLB, you will want to add them.

Q: I used to have an elevator company that had a "C-11" license. It was suspended eight years ago. I shut the company down and I want to start another company. Can I get another license under a different company name? Would I have to take the exam again?

A: Thank you for contacting Capitol Services. You should be able to obtain a license again, but of course it depends on the reason for the prior suspension. Unfortunately, since it's been over five years since you were licensed, you would be required to take the exams again.

While knowledge is power, knowing where to go for the answers is half the battle. ## INTRODUCTION

Sheet metal shears are machines that cut sheet metal as it is fed through the machine. There are many hazards involved, including pinch points and sharp edges – so it is very important for employees who work with these machines to apply all of the necessary safety procedures.

HAZARDS

- Possible hazards that exist when operating sheet metal shears include:
- Amputation from the shear blade if the proper safety guards and work practices are not used.
- Flying objects such as jagged metal or work pieces being ejected from the exit side of the shear.
- Cuts, laceration, or puncture wounds from the shear blade or sharp sheet metal edges.
- Pinch Points from clamps, moving parts, and the space between the workpiece and the shear.

SAFE WORK PRACTICES

In order to reduce the risk of injury for you and those around you, employees may not use the sheet metal shears unless they agree to practice the following safety procedures:

- Understand and follow manufacturer operating procedures.
- Inspect the tool for damage prior to use.
- Verify that all guards are in place and adjusted properly before operating.
- Become familiar with all potential pinch points to prevent accident contact with them.
- Never alter any guards or safety devices at any time.
- Wear protective gloves and safety glasses when operating the sheet metal shears.
- Keep fingers clear of the blade.
- If you notice malfunction or damage, report it to a supervisor and lock and tag out the machine.

SHEET METAL SHEAR SAFETY

- For foot operated manual shears, make sure the foot that is not being used to operate is kept out from under the treadle.
- Never attempt to exceed the capacity of the tool.
  - Do not use an extension bar on the handle to increase leverage.
  - For foot operated manual shears, never jump on or place both feet on the treadle.
- Do not attempt to shear multiple workpieces at a single time.
- If a two-person operation is required, communication and responsibilities must be clear.
  - The helper must give the signal to the operator to cycle the shear.
  - The operator must know the helper's position at all times and give a "clear" signal before bringing the blade down.
- Never feed material from the backside of the shear.
- Place metal scraps and trimmings in metal waste containers, careful to avoid the sharp edges.
- Clean your work space as you go to remove dust or scraps that could cause you to slip.
- Do not leave a running sheet metal shear machine unattended.

CONCLUSION

Sheet metal shears are very powerful machines that can cause serious injury if used incorrectly. Understand the hazards involved, wear protective gloves when operating, and follow all of the safe work practices to protect your health and safety.
