

Capitol Connection Q&A for Contractors

Week of 3/11/2024

By Shauna Krause, President, Capitol Services, Inc.

The only way to be individually active, and qualify a license as well, is to have 'skin' in the game. I let the 'air' out of a General's plan, while helping an RMO clear up his 'calendar' problem...

Q: We currently hold ""B and a "C-51" license and are looking to add "C-39" (roofing) work to our scope. I am considering an individual that will work full time and has his "C-39". If he is the RME can he continue his weekend work under his license as well? Or would he need to be an Responsible Managing Officer (RMO)?

A: The only way he would be able to keep his personal license active while acting as your "C-39" Qualifier is if he's an RMO and owns at least 20% of your company. If he doesn't own at least 20%, he would be required to inactivate his personal license.

Q: Hi Shauna, I found your company through google. If we hold a General "B" license but do HVAC work as incidental work over the last 20 years. Is there a way to add the "C-20" (HVAC) license to our company while having the exam waived?

A: Thank you for contacting me. No, the CSLB does not consider the "C-20" to be a closely related and significant component to the General "B" license. Therefore, if you wanted to add it to your license, the person you decide to use as your Qualifier would be required to show their experience and sit for the exam.

Q: When replacing our current RMO with another RMO, how long does the new RMO's name need to be listed as an Officer on the license with the CSLB? Does the replacement RMO need to have worked at the corporation in a supervisory capacity for 5 of the last 7 years?

A: No, not necessarily. If the replacement RMO is wanting to be granted a waiver of the exams, he/she would either need to be listed as an Officer on the license for 5 out of the last 7 years, OR worked for the company in a Supervisory capacity for 5 out of the last 7 years. If the person is not concerned with a Waiver, then they just need to show the experience in the Trade and there is no particular time frame in which the individual has to have been listed as an Officer or worked for the company in a supervisory capacity.

While knowledge is power, knowing where to go for the answers is half the battle. INTRODUCTION

Working above the ground can be dangerous at any height. Tree saddles and other safety equipment are designed to protect people in case of a fall. Following these safe work practices will help to ensure the safety of all employees working in trees.

TREE CLIMBING ACCIDENTS

Accidents relating to working in trees can cause severe injury, or even death. The most common causes of falls from trees are:

- Disconnection of fall protection
- Accidental cutting of fall protection
- Not using fall protection
- Failure of the tie-in point

INSPECTION

Proper inspection of tree saddles and other safety equipment is perhaps the most important step in preventing accidents.

- Tree saddles should be inspected for:
 - Damage
 - Defects
- Excessive wear and tear.
 - Tree saddles should not be used if:
 - There is significant damage.
 - There are cuts in the material.
 - The stitching is broken.
 - The metal is cracked or damaged.
 - The grommets are damaged or missing.

SAFE WORK PRACTICES

- Saddles should be specifically designed for tree climbing.
- Tree climbing equipment should never be altered.
- All appropriate personal protective equipment (PPE) should be worn in addition to saddles/harnesses, these include, but are not limited to:
 - Head Protection
 - Eye Protection
 - Protective Clothing
 - Leg Protection/Chaps
 - Boots
 - Gloves
- Employees should remain in saddle/harness until work is done.
- The tree should be inspected before work begins.
- If the weather creates an unsafe work environment, work should be stopped immediately.
- Employees should remain aware of their surroundings, including what coworkers are doing.
- Workers should have at least two means of being secured when working in trees i.e. lanyard along with harness.

CONCLUSION

Tree saddles and other safety equipment are designed for the protection of employees working in trees. These apparatuses can only work if they are in good repair and those using them observe workplace safety rules. Following the guidelines listed above can help to ensure that there is a safe work environment.
